

Dry skin is often a side effect of chemotherapy. Chemotherapy drugs can cause the skin to become dry, cracked and peeling. Dry skin can also occur as a result of dehydration, weather conditions, and other medications.

Dry skin occurs when the layers of the skin lose essential oils and moisture. Dry skin is characterized by mild scaling, roughness, feeling of tightness, and possibly itching. With dry skin reactions, the skin cells at the lower layer of the epidermis (top layer of skin) are dry and flat, with no moisture.

Monarch Care's Chemo Care is an all natural thick, rich emollient that softens skins and adds moisture. It significantly decreases dryness. Using Chemo Care morning and night you will notice a change in your skin within a short time. Chemo Care should be used before, during and after chemotherapy to keep your skin moisturized.

Key ingredients that make the Chemo Care so helpful are the cocoa and shea butters and the jojoba and olive oil which help relieve itchiness and dryness. Chemo depletes the good cells associated with natural moisture in the skin. Chemo patients almost always get dehydrated. Adding moisture to the skin creates a protective layer to the fragile skin cells and prevents cracking. Once your skin is maintaining moisture and the integrity improves, discontinue Chemo Care and apply Skin Deep Extra Dry Emollient to the area morning and night or more frequently if needed. We do not claim our products to be curative.
